The officers and men of the Finers landed on shore for a review last Tuesday. His Majesty the King arrived on the ground about 4 o'clock and was received by the Captain and his Aids. The whole company presented arms and the band of the ship played their national anthem. The review commenced with the small arm drill; then followed a march round during which the rapidity of changing the formation of the company was displayed. The review concluded with a sham fight. Skirmishers were thrown out to clear the wood in front.—the little groups kneeling among the bushes and the crack, crack, of the rifles made a very animated scene. The skirmishers were called in and again sent forward, then orders were given to open ranks in the centre, through this given to open ranks in the centre, through this opening the main body which had been kept in reserve change with fixed bayonets, giving a ringing cheer as they advanced, arrived at the edge of the timber they fixed three or four volleys in platoon, and now having quite demolished their imaginary for they marched back to their former position, presented arms, and the review was over. The roads are in frightful condition, but as this s nothing new for Hawaii, perhaps it will not interest general readers. The estimate of the total loss by the fire on the steamer City of Sydney is estimated by the Marine Adjuster at $3,000, of which $30,000 is on the cargo and $5,000 on the vessel. The report of the inspectors says: The testimony taken in this case shows beyond doubt that the fire originated in the freight on board consigned for Honolulu and stored in the steerage deck forward; and we have taken evidence, particularly, to find out the cause of the fire, but said evidence has not enabled us to ascertain its true source. The evidence in this case shows that there were shipped for Honolulu two cases of oil clothing, said cases having only holes bored in them to admit air, and, according to the testimony of those who manufacture oil clothing, it will ignite in a short time when packed freshly oiled, and is, therefore, liable to spontaneous combustion. From the evidence given in this case we also find that opium was found in the debris without having been regularly shipped, and from this it is inferable there might have been other articles of combustible nature shipped unknown to the agents or officers of the ship. We are, therefore, unable to decide positively what was the true source of the fire, although the evidence points strongly to the cases of oil clothing, as one of the cases was wholly destroyed.

The London Times, referring to the situation in Afghanistan, says: In India, as here, something like an interregaum must prevail until the impending changes have been made. Lord Lytton, viceroy, has been so identified with the present Government, and was so fully committed to its plans, that his prolonged tenure of office is as little possible, as it is desirable. The only doubt is whether he will wait to be called, or will anticipate by his own act a result he can scarcely hope to avoid. The name of Lord Northbrook, former ly Governor-General of India, suggests itself as Lord Lytton's successor, but Lord Northbrook does not wish to return to his old post. There is less room for doubt regarding instructions that the new Viceroy will take with him.
